Grant and Butler's scalps.

Ben Butler is in error to suppose that the "solid mea" who have always diotated the politics of the old Bay State, will, like a casten faction of professional politicians in New York or Philadelphia, turn and fawn on the victor. No, indeed. Such an opposition to Grant, who is looked upon as Butler's ally, will spring up as he little dreamed of when, in the name of peace and harmony in the party, he refused to withdraw Simmons' name. The advantage is only a temporary one for Butler, and as for Boutwell, who deserted him, he is d—d by both parties—by one for his treachery and the other for his shilly-shally efforts against Simmons. Sumner is greatly advantaged by the turn that things have taken; the aristocracy of his State will now side with him as against Grant and the rag-ing and bobtail politicians led by the Essex statesman.

Grant will find that he has alienated the Radical party of New England from him and he will not be able to control it for him self or either of his friends—Washburne of Conking—for the Presidential nomination Conking—for the Presidential nomination. That very clever gentleman and shrewd politician—Speaker Blaine—is, no doubt, laughing in his sleeve at Grant's blundering. Those Radicals opposed to having the Grant dynasty perpetuated by either Washburne the testy, or Conkling the pretty, will naturally turn to Blaine as the most available candidate against the administration combination. Conkling stood manfully by Butter as he is desirous that the Boston custom house shall, under Benny's dictation, be a nest of corruption is which ictation, be a nest of corruption in whi dictation, be a nest of corruption in which to raise election funds similar to the New York Custom House, so that Massachusetts could be controlled through that agency. Grant stuck by Butler like a little Major, and Benny is very grateful for it. The reason, assigned by a number of Senators for voting for Simmons' confirmation was because they leared to appear factious by rejecting this appointment so close prom the heels of the leared to appear factious by rejecting this appointment so close upon the heels of the Chief Justice effair, and so in order to save the Presidential feelings the peace and harmony of the Republican party in Massachusetts is endangered. From the tone of the losing party, Butler will be squelched or the party of which he is an exemplar will be split in twais. If he, Ben, is at all splitful he c. n console himself that in case of less, he has ratifed Grant—that is in making or he has rattled Grant-that is in making o ne ms rattice Grant—that is in making of dicating the next Presidential nomination. Butler's victory has been the subject of con-versation for two days past. Monday's leg-islation will no doubt furnish a new topic and the Simmons-Butler affair will be transeried to Boston for settlement.

A SAN DOMINGO FOUALL. The arrest of Baez, ex-President of Saw Domingo, at New York, at the suit of Davis Hatch, who was imprisoned by Baez in 1869, has caused quite a flutter here. It will be remembered that charges were made against Gen. Baboock, during the consideration of the San Domingo treaty, of being instrumental in having Hatch imprisoned. The outspoken denunciations of Baboock, by Senstors Summer and Perry, made such a sensation that an investigating committee was ordered; but when such as Kye, Howard, Williams and Warner were appointed—a majority of the committee—a case of smothering up was to be expected. Mesers. Perry, Schurz and Vickers protested, in vain, and the administration was saved from exposure.

The people of the country bave seen the Senator from Michigan—Chandler—in a number of characters during the past sixteen number of characters during the past sixteen years. As a war Senator, howling for blood, hangings and "On to Richmond." As a persistent squelcher of the British Lion, and as a drunken libidinous lout, an acknowledged diagrace to the United States Senate. Now, however, he appears in an entirely different character—that of injured innocence, a martyr to calumny, and a victim of newspaporial scandal. It has been published in the Detroit Free Press that Zack was beastly drunk in the Senate and was led out and placek for libel. I do not think that Chandler can prove malice on the part of the correspondent or publisher, for the whole country, scarcely without exception, believe that Chandler's drunkenn as is chronic, and the very fact of a note being made of him on a lark, implies that there are times when he is not so; thereby causing a doubt in the minds of the people, as to his life being one constant drunk. The Chronicle of this city, in defending Zack, says that "Those familiar with Senatur Chandler's long Seastorial life, need no deniat of the charge." If this is meant, it is rios; if intended as "sar-kasum," it is better.
